Soviet Scientist Tells Probers Of Washington Clique

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29 (A) -A former Russian scientist, given asylum in the West in 1946, told a Senate group today that a clique of Soviet secret police agents are working as research consultants

The scientist, Valintin L. Sokolov, made the statement at a hearing conducted by the Senate Internal Security subcommittee.

Robert Morris, the committee's special counsel, immediately recessed the public hearing so that the committee could go into executive session.

Afterward, Morris said Sokolov "gave the committee the names of people who are being utilized' as secret agents.

Morris had no further comment on the executive session nor on Sokolov's testimony. He indicated that much of the information supplied by Sokolov was necessarily confidential

Churches Carry On Business In Corporate Style

By GEORGE W. CORNELL AP Religion Writer

Church business today is big And it's carried on in big, corporate style. This country's biggest religious corporation of them all is holding a weeklong meeting of the stockholders starting this Sunday, and the agenda indicates the scope of the industry

The churches have a hand in just about any service field you

In the case of the current meeting, being held in St. Louis, the corporation is the National Council of Churches, and its working subsidiaries extend into scores of activities far beyond pew and pul-

Radio and television broadcasting, teaching illiterates to read, running health clinics, training marriage counselors, finding homes for refugees, prodding politicians, printing books, analyzing community problems. All in all the council in its seven-year history, has become a highly versatile institution, doing all sorts of public and pious

"The vigorous interest of the council in the health, education and general welfare of the Amer ican people is increasingly evi dent," says Marion B. Folsom U. S. secretary of health, education and welfare

Just what is this big, churchly corporation that has launched causes on so many fronts?

Well, for one thing, it includes nearly every kind, clique and cat egory of Protestant and Orthodox church, but it vows positively that it is not a church.

It declares it does not, and can not, act or teach on matters of doctrine as a church does.

Only one required concept welds all the 30 member denominations together-belief in "Jesus Christ as divine Lord and Savior.

There the creedal identity stops -and ideas about baptism, com munion and other tenets vary all over the lot

But on the basis of the one shared Christian belief, the assorted denominations decided back in 1950 to pool their forces on a vast range of practical, down-

In this way, says Council General Secretary Roy G. Ross, even without doctrinal uniformity, the churches can move more effectively to "spread the whole Gospel through the whole church in

The council includes 13 formerly separate interdenominational agencies in addition to 30 denominations with 35 million members. Counting these, participating churches have more than 50 mil-

A main motive of the Council has been to give the churches their legitimate say-so in the national affairs.

The council has an 1814-milliondollar budget for this year, and proposals are to up it another mil lion next year. It is building a new 19-million dollar headquarters in New York. Altogether, the council has 76 different units, each carrying on a different type of activity. A few things the council does: Provides worship, recreational and education programs for more than a quarter million migrant agricultural workers and their families.

Offers expert architectural services to congregations wanting to build new churches.

Aids communities in organizing joint evangelism crusades. Gives specialized training to clergymen in working with alco holics, prisoners, ex-convicts and juvenile delinquents. Sends literacy teams into backward areas to teach people to read Runs health and rehabilitation projects for Indians and other groups in this country-and in Korea. Alaska, Africa and Hong Kong Produces more than 1,000 religious radio and TV programs a year.

Provides guidance and materials to communities in operating weekday and vacation church schools in which six million children are enrolled.

Supplies literature and sends pastors to 80 English-language churches abroad, serving Americans overseas

Staffs chapels and other worship places in the nation's 24 national parks each summer. Through the student volunteer movement, recruits new volunteers for home and foreign mis-

Through Church World Service its relief arm, ships vast quantities of food, clothing and medicine to needy areas abroad each year-351/2 million dollars worth of goods in 1956.

Helps obtain and counsel personnel for more than 2,900 hospitals, dispensaries and medical training centers run by 50 Protestant mission boards overseas. Guides the production of uniform Sunday school outlines used by 20 million Protestant children

Even a perfect figure won't "Do You Measure Up?", our Dingle. year, aren't merely lucky-they this newspaper. really are holding their own, their own weight and measurements, program. The program includes keeping three dates

1. A late every day. This date is with figure-keeping exercise. Firm muscles, above all else, protect the contours of the figure against change. The good figure must be trim, and proper weight alone does not guarantee it. You rest on your laurels after losing the right number of pounds or correcting a contour or posture fault. Keep in training every day to keep in trim. The exercise can be a general figure-keeper, such as the figure 8 special the Powers girls made famous, or one that puts more emphasis on your own particular danger spot.

2. A date every week. The time to start dieting is the first minute overweight registers. Thus a check-up with a scale is necessary at least once a week to catch that extra pound or two before matters grow worse. It's no trouble to keep this weekly date with the scale-and it can make a big difference in the effort it takes to reduce weight. 3. A date once a month. This date is with a tape measure, just to make sure of every proportion. It may signal special spot-reducing exercise that wasn't needed before; but again, the regular check-up flashes warning in good time. Tea For Two Million--And Then Some

1. First step in starting a new tea plantation, or estate in Ceylon. Tea seeds are placed in bed, six inches apart. The novel board with holes regulates the proper distance between seeds.

2. When tea plants are several inches high, they are transferred from seed bed to nursery where they are kept until they're 6 to 18 months old. They're then transplanted onto the estate.

4. With a large wicker basket tied to her back, a girl tea picker goes about plucking the "flush," or tender new leaves.

Four o'clock tea means little to the tea pickers of Ceylon except that it's just another moment in the day-in-and-day-out job of getting tea out for the rest of the world.

Ceylon's economy revolves around tea. It is the island's most important export. The United States buys the lion's share of her tea crop. Last year America imported 105,900,000 pounds (20 billion cups of tea) and 43 per cent of it came from Ceylon.

Tea is picked the year around in Ceylon. It's a non-stop harvest. About everyten days women pickers go into the fields with baskets tied to their backs and pick the "flush" or sprouting new tea leaves from each bush. A good picker can pluck 160 pounds of leaves a day, enough to make 40 pounds of finished tea.

After the tea pickers' baskets are weighed (the pickers are paid by weight of the leaves plucked), the tea leaves are sent to the factory, usually on the tea plantation, or "estate," where they are processed. These processes include withering, rolling, roll-breaking, fermentation, and drying or firing. The leaves are then put through sieves, with graduated mesh, to sort them for distribution commercially. These sieves divide them into leaf and broken grades.

5. Tea pickers have their baskets weighed on basis of which they are paid. Tea is then bagged and sent to nearby factory for processing.

6. In factory, heated air is passed over racks on which tea leaves are spread. Water in leaves evaporates, making them soft and pliable.

7. Leaves are then passed to rolling machinery, where they are twisted and rolled, to break up leaf cells and liberate juices.

8. In fermentation room, leaves are spread on floor in cool, damp atmosphere. Through absorption of oxygen, they turn bright copper color.

KEYSER-The directing heads sors of the annual Ham. Bacon and Egg Show held each year in Keyser have announced that this year there will be two big features in place of one. A regional Science Fair is planned for March this year, and will be held in the Keyser High School gymnasium under the same sponsorship and at the same time and place.

The Kiwanis committee has con tacted the high schools of Berkeley. Grant, Hardy, Jefferson, Hampshire and Mineral Counties as well as some of the high schools in Maryland.

The executive committee of the West Virginia Academy of Science has voiced approval of this movement and the Regional Science Fair Committee of that organization has consented through its regional chairman to assist in the plans for the fair.

The fair will be held on March 14 and 15 at the same time the Kiwanis Club of Keyser sponsor its annual Ham, Bacon and Egg Show. Cash awards of not less than $50 or items of equivalent value will be presented to the boy and the girl who are declared winners and whose exhibits conform to the rules of the fair. Additional awards are planned for other winners

As is generally known both at the state and national level emphasis is being directed toward sound science training and understanding, and through the media of Science Fairs involving high school students much progress has been made.

The Pattern Of Despotism

Czechoslovakia has a new president in place of the late Antonin Zapotocky. He is Antonin Novotny, and it cannot be said that his "election" comes as a surprise, though advance notices had indicated that Premier Viliam Siroky would get the job.

Novotny is first secretary of the Czech Communist Party. In Communist regimes that is the post usually held by the No. 1 Communist. So if Novotny wanted to be president of Czechoslovakia, all he had to do was make his wishes

This he obviously did.

The only surprise connected with Novotny's accession to the presidency is that he wanted it -and decided to take it while keeping the party post. The late Kliment Gottwald held both positions in the early days of Communist ascendancy in Czechoslovakia, but that precedent has not been followed. It must be that Novotny considers that present conditions require special

Not present conditions in Czechoslovakia, perhaps-present conditions in the Communist world. In Soviet Russia the last few months have seen the emergence of Khrushchev as the heir of Stalin. Khrushchev is in control, his right to rule is unchallenged, he is in fact the

The Communist pattern, the pattern of despotism, is being repeated in Russia. It must be repeated in every Russian satellite. In Czechoslovakia the handwriting on the wall has been read and appropriate action has been taken.

These Days

A Little Foresight

Let us face it: NATO is in peril. The danger arises from three causes:

West Europe expects too much from the United States and the Americans are finding the burden of the demands oppressive;

2. Most Americans believe that the era of imperialism and colonialism has ended, when as a matter of fact we are entering upon a new type of imperialism which can encompass the entire human race. It is the anti-colonialism of Americans which is causing so much havoc in France and which is imperilling NATO;

3. The quarrels and jealousies among Western European nations, as contrasted with the monolithic Soviet system, imperils not only NATO but the United Nations. The quarrel between Greece and Turkey over Cyprus wrecked the Balkan Alliance; the American and British attacks upon France over Algeria, Tunisia and Morocco, and the American opposition to British, French and Israeli policy concerning Egypt have weakened the Anglo-American Alliance, the Anglo-American-French Alliance and NATO generally.

Way back in 1951, Bernard Baruch, speaking at the Lord Mayor's Dinner in London, tried to deal with precisely this situation in advance of its occurrence. It is, of course, difficult to be a prophet, particularly when the words of the prophet are unwelcome. On July 24, 1951, Baruch said to the "Supporting the Marshall Plan I strongly advocated that, if Europe united in a common defense against aggression. America should agree to go if necessary to war to help in that defense. Many have complained that heretofore we came only after war commenced. That criticism can no longer be levelled at us. We have already given of our resources. We have considerable forces here to join in the common European defense. These will increase. I do not and cannot speak for my government. But I would be less than frank if I did not tell you what I think and what the majority of Americans think too.

Unless the peoples of Europe unite and quickly give their full all-out support to General Eisenhower in his efforts to bring about a common defense, you cannot count on America's economic and military aid continuing. We will meet more than generously whatever Europeans do. If you show no hesitation and undertake your full share, we will go to the limit. Then the burdens will be less for all concerned."

Further, he then said:

"I realize the difficulties the peoples of Europe have undergone, and the further sacrifices necessary to attain the end we all seek. We shall do more than match your efforts. But do not let Americans feel that you are not willing to shoulder your fair share of the burdens. Korea has shown that we are lacking neither in leadership nor sacrifice. But if we are to succeed you must do more there and your full share here. Let us not be discouraged or faint-hearted, however great the difficulties. There is no price tag on Freedom. If we lose that, we lose all'

United Europe is not as close at hand today as it was in 1951. During the past six years, too many disagreements have occurred among the Western Europeans for a United States of Europe to be feasible and yet if Western Europe fails to recognize the necessity of finding a foundation for strength that will not be wholly dependent upon the United States, sooner or later Soviet Russia will test its strength against some of those

After all, even Great Britain is only a bow-andarrow's distance from a Russian bomb in this age of the Sputnik and that is undoubtedly the reason why British political leaders of both parties are so nervous over the uncertainties of American policy. When there is no telling what way the wind will shift in Washington, it is impossible for our allies to know what they can do without offending President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles. Aneurin Bevan, at any rate, spoke his mind freely in this country and while his views were wholly unofficial, they might soon enough be not only official but prevailing.

As it stands today, NATO is politically in bad shape. Whether the damage done during the past few years can be repaired, only time can tell and there is very little time left.

Let's Not Neglect That

Dulles-Style Bastions And Jordan's Problems

By Joseph Alsop

Among the world's few palaces still inhabited by reigning monarchs, the Basman palace is certainly the least palatial. The modest stone structure stands on a dusty hill above this little city, The king has great assets, to with a view across a narrow valley to another dusty hill where be sure. Under pressure of negoats browse on the scant desert cessity, he has grown very rap-

But this palace of young Hussein, King of Jordan, hardly larger than a big Western country house, is now perhaps the most sensitive single spot in all the troubled Middle East.

The Egyptians, the Syrians and the Soviets have vowed to destroy Hussein and his government by any means within their power. Organized bomb outrages, organized subversion, organized lies of unprecedented shameless. ness-all these and other weapons have been used. Since the twenty-three year old king has stood annoyingly firm, Gamal Abdel Nasser's Cairo radio has lately taken to open incitement to

There is method, too, in this macabre and seemingly lunaties violence. For if Jordan can only be reduced to a Soviet-Egyptian satellite on the Syrian model, the days of independent Iraq will be numbered. And if Iraq falls, it will soon be the turn of the oil-rick sheikhdoms of the Persian Gulf and of Saudi Arabia itself.

Nothing but young Hussein's naked courage saved Jordan from the Soviet-Egyptian sponsored coup d'etat last April. Nothing but Hussein's stout determination is saving Jordan today. His coolness, his firmness must impress anyone who talks with him, as this reporter has just done at some length.

Courage always tends to be the winning quality, especially when it is in rather short supply, among the opposition, as is the case here in Jordan. Nevertheless, it is necessary to face the plain fact that the position here in Jordan is at least very peril-idly in self assurance and maturity. He has grown too in the respect of his people and of political leaders. Despite the most active efforts to infiltrate the army, finally, the king still commands the loyalty of the Arab Legion; and here in Jordan, as in every Arab country, the army is the decisive factor in politics. Out against these items on the credit side of the balance sheet, it is necessary to balance a heavy list of itoms on the dehit side. There is the tragic plight of the half-million Palestinian refugees, who form a third of Syrian-Egyptian-Soviet brand of "Arab nationalism." There is the bandwagon effect of the recent leftwing success in Syria, which has frightened Jordan's moderates and made them reluctant to commit themselves to Hussein.

The young king is sternly confident that he can maintain Jordan's independence, despite the powerful forces massed against him. But it sticks out like a sore thumb here, that urgent measures are needed to improve the odds in the king's favor.

The United States alone can take these measures. The responsibility to do so was publicly accepted by President Eisenhower himself at the time of the April crisis here. But consider what has followed! Even the $30,000 . 000 of aid without strings that the President then publicly promised was very nearly lost in the Jordan's total population. There strange recesses of the adminisis Jordan's basic poverty. There trative and policy making mais the continuous appeal of the chinery in Washington. When this reporter was last here, six months ago, the American Embassy was desperately waiting for a messenger from Washington who was bringing word whether the President's promise would be kept or broken.

As these words are written, the Embassy is again desperately wating for another messenger from Washington. He is alleged to have the answer to the great question, whether we have anything that deserves the name of a policy for Jordan.

A real policy for Jordan has two basic requirements. First of all, enough money must be provided, not just to pay the army as in the past, but also to start useful projects, like the exploitation of Jordan's valuable phosphate deposits and the irrigation of the Yarmouk River valley. ful projects, the extra money would be needed for the simple purpose of making work, and thus creating a new atmosphere of hope.

For this purpose, an increase of aid to Jordan from the present level of thirty million a year to a new level of fifty million a year will be ample. It is not much. By the same token, only a few more millions are needed to satisfy the second essential requirement. This is the requirement of adequate financing for the work of the United Nations relief and welfare administration among the Palestinian refugees. Yet at this moment, the admirable director of the critical refugee relief program, Henry Labouisse, is at the United Nations publicly pleading bankruptcy.

In a most literal sense, Jordan is a bastion of the free world position in the Middle East. It has been officially classified as such by Secretary of State Dulles as well as by the President. It seems we have a rather vague way of defending bastions.

Children Must Mature At Their Own Pace

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Many parents rear their children by the book and are overly concerned should their pride and joy fail to do what is expected at a certain age. When this anxiety persists, the youngster becomes concerned, too, and the seeds are sown for future anxiety and insecurity.

Most parents do the best they can for their children and usually blame themselves when Johnny does not talk at a certain age. Mary, a month younger, is blabbering all over the place. The parents fail to realize that children mature at different rates. Boys are slower than girls in talking, walking, bowel and bladder control, and even in learning at school. There is nothing to do about it except wait until they are fully grown after their 18th birthday. Girls shoot up faster than boys at certain ages but more than one neighborhood shrimp has become the 6' 3" player on the university football team.

Numerous problems arise when youngsters are not permitted to develop at their own pace. Emotional conflicts are traced frequently to trouble during these focal points of development. It is well known that children learn to walk at age 1, talk at age 2, and dress and become toilet trained by age 3. By age 4, many are becoming independent and start showing more interest in other children. They acquire knowledge after going to school, and sex enters the picture during the early teens. Each phase is difficult for the parents, especially if their own experiences have been different. Inactive, passive men and women cannot appreciate the needs of a vigorous, muscular child. The same can be said of active parents of a quiet, passive youngster.

Families who derive satisfaction from cuddling a youngster may become worried and apprehensive when the young child shows independence. They may retard development when they over-protect him in an attempt to prolong babyhood.

In contrast are couples who did not have a happy childhood; they become irritable when the child fails at toilet training or otherwise is slow. These fathers and mothers have an unconscious desire for the youngsters to get childhood over with, instead of allowing their offspring to proceed at their own pace.

Insight Of Russian Military Might

U. S. Intelligence Has Accurate

tative sources, we have learned the following unsugarcoated facts about Russia's military might:

NUCLEAR POWER - Russia, whose first A-bomb was exploded four years behind ours, today has practically caught up with us in nuclear fire power. Our stockpile is larger, but Russia has enough bombs to cripple this country.

We have reduced the H-bomb to a more compact warhead and designed a so-called "clean" bomb, relatively free from radioactive hazard. But less important than the compactness and size of the warhead is the fact that Russia definitely does have the hydrogen warhead. Russia has also improved the trigger mechanism of the bomb.

Russia is also known to be ahead of us in developing an atomic rocket capable of space

Despite this, the administration is still refusing to spend $8 million that Congress has already appropriated for nuclear power rocket work. Newspaper headlines have announced to the contrary, but as of this writing, the headlines are not accurate.

Congress originally appropriated $25 million for nuclear rocket work for the fiscal year 1956. This was called "Project Rover." The administration, however, impounded $10 million of this amount, against the wishes of Congress. As a result, the Livermore Radiation Laboratory in California had to shut down.

In June 1956, Congress voted an additional $9.1 million for Project Rover; but the administration would spend only $1.1

Last week Secretary of Defense McElroy authorized the Air Force to go full speed ahead with the project and the $10 million originally impounded was released for the construction of test facilities. However, the Budget Bureau, which operates directly under the White House and can overrule the Secretary of Defense, still won't release the remaining $8 million Secretary McElroy talked about.

Soviet today has the world's largest air force. She has thousands more combat planes than we, and her factories are producing them faster. Our technical intelligence has made detailed examinations of several Red planes that have fallen into our hands, and these autopsies show Russian technology lagged behind us from 1945 until 1952.

Since 1952, the Russians have equaled our best efforts in air weapons. In planes that count, Russia has over 13,000 sleek modern jets assigned to combat units. Our total, counting both Air Force and Navy, adds up to less than 9,500 jets. The Russians have twice as many intercontinental jet bombers and swarms more jet fighters considered slightly superior to ours.

The Red Army-The massive Red Army is 10 times the size of ours. Its 175 divisions not only outclass our 17 divisions in manpower, but in firepower as well.

The Russian divisions are highly mobile, armed with rockets, and trained in atomic warfare. They are a match for our vaunted pentomic divisions, which likewise have been streamlined for atomic warfare. The Red Army relies on helicopters and armored personnel carriers for mobility. It is equipped with fast-moving, self-propelled assault artillery and heavy tanks more rugged than ours. Naval power - The world doesn't seem to realize it, but in a few short years the Russian Navy has jumped from a handful of ancient impotent vessels to the rank of 2nd in the world. It has put the famous British fleet in 3rd place. In the Black Sea alone, Russia cruisers three times the size of the U. S. 6th Fleet, cruising only a few miles distant in the Mediterranean. It is in submarines, however, that Russia has made its most

And this cockeyed world will rave about it.

Bnt it will not mark a scientific advance so much as a spectacular feat, for the Moon has been an established satellite ever since the morning stars sang together: and it is not likely that any mere sputnik will outsplendor the Queen of heaven, or affect the ebb and flow of the tides.

What happens on our planet is more important than anything that happens beyond its rim. We already know more about the stars than they know about themselves. They are not even selfconscious.

On the other hand. Man knows more than he makes proper use of. There is danger that he may Frankenstein himself by building up a mechanism designed for destructive purposes that will turn upon him and rend him.

If our political leaders would use their ingenuity in devising instruments of peace rather than of war, civilization might be set forward at a more rapid pace than we are now going. As the field of knowledge broad-

Meeting Set To Discuss County Roads

A meeting will be held December 18 at 10 a.m. at the State Roads Commission office in Baltimore at which members of the Allegany County Board of Commissioners, State Senator Charles M. See and members of the county delegation to the General Assembly will discuss the 12-year road program in this county.

Norman Pritchett, chief engineer of the SRC, told William H. Lemmert, president of the county board, that the session will be a day-long one as there NEW FREIGHT AGENTare many matters pertaining to the 12-year road program which will be discussed

Besides the officials mentioned, the meeting will be attended by Gorman E. Getty, attorney to the county board and J. Walker Chapman, roads supervisor.

The session is important be cause the various county officials are expected to make known at that time some of the road work which they prefer to have done and for which legislative action may be needed.

Commissioner James Orr said that he intends to bring up the matter of the SRC taking over the Pinto Road and bridge across the Potomac River. The county has maintained the bridge for many years along with the State of West Virginia. The county commissioners felt that the SRC should assume the county's responsibility as the structure is Regular Checks an interstate one and does not come within the usual scope of county responsibility.

Probes Local Man's Murder 'Confession'

A detective of the Massachusetts State Police arrived in Cumberland yesterday evening to investigate the story of 33-year-old Elmer Bisbing who confessed Tuesday to the murder of a Cambridge girl in 1946 near Ames Detective Lt. John N. Sullivan and Edwin R. Lilya, Allegany County criminal investigator, last night questioned Bisbing for several hours in the state's attorney's office.

Lilya said nothing definite was determined at last night's session, and that the local welder will be interrogated again this

Lt. Sullivan, who has been assigned to the case since the crime was committed in July 1946, flew to Washington, D. C., yesterday and was brought here by Mary-land State Police.

The case here began when Bisbing telephoned Detective George Furstenberg earlier this week and told him he had something important to tell him. Later he told Detective Furstenberg that he choked Miss Ruth McGuirk to death following a dance. Bisbing, when first questioned,
